

[TACTICAL COMBAT CASUALTY CARE (TCCC) MEDICAL TRAINING]

Over a three-year period, operational personnel from an international defence force, representing various ranks, professions, and services, underwent critical medical training at an international allied military base before deploying to operational theatres across the Middle East. The responsibility for delivering this Tactical Combat Casualty Care (TCCC) training, including assessment and final confirmation, fell to Iqarus, the Training Division of International SOS.

Over a three-year period, operational personnel from an international defence force, representing various ranks, professions, and services, underwent critical medical training at an international allied military base before deploying to operational theatres across the Middle East. The responsibility for delivering this Tactical Combat Casualty Care (TCCC) training, including assessment and final confirmation, fell to Iqarus, the Training Division of International SOS.

More than 14,000 individuals received tailored training and assessment, spanning large cohorts of over 700 to highly specialised pairs. These included members of the armed forces, medical units, and civilian support organisations. Providing tailored instruction regardless of prior experience required a highly skilled training team - a challenge Iqarus was well-prepared to meet.

The training team brought extensive operational military medical experience, including former Officers in Command of Special Forces medical training units, Warrant Officers from elite medical support units, Royal Marine Commandos, Royal Navy Medics, and medics with Special Forces backgrounds.

When COVID-19 disrupted global operations, the team swiftly adapted, developing and implementing pragmatic solutions to continue delivering training safely under evolving restrictions.

Training outcomes were closely monitored through contractual oversight and strategic review mechanisms, consistently showing that Iqarus exceeded required standards. This success was further reinforced by overwhelmingly positive feedback from participants, whose operational readiness and confidence served as a true measure of effectiveness.

“ Greatly appreciate the operational and contemporary experience of the trainers and their ability to explain the principles and the reason why certain methods are applied. Once again, the Trg has been professionally delivered and prepared me for my movement into the operational area. Thank you, this was the best TCCC that I have done. ”

“ Thank you for all the knowledge bombs! ”

“ TCCC was done multiple times during force prep. Recommend stopping all TCCC done at home and just do it here. ”

“ Brilliant lessons, compared to course in Aus this was 200% better. Now leaving feeling very confident. Thank you. ”

“ TCCC was good. Should be done like that back in the units. ”